RAILROAD VICTIM WAS JOHN DEVLIN

Man Killed at New Oxford was Former Philadelphian. Body Disinterred and Identified by his Brother. Had Good Home.

The body of the tramp who was killed by a Western Maryland engine at New Oxford several weeks ago was disinterred Wednesday by Steward Sheely of the County Home and identified as John Devlin of Philadelphia. The identification was made by his brother, Edward, Devlin, a prosperous dealer in cotton and woolen waste. The developments of Wednesday contradict the story, circulated shortly after the tragic death of the man, which gave his name as Clarence Sherman, of Taneytown. This theory has been further contradicted by the news that Sherman was with his mother near Baltimore on the day of the accident.

The identification of Devlin came about through a man in Harrisburg to whom he had given one of his cards asking for alms. This man, Frank Sullivan, knew both Devlin and his brother, and when he saw the account of the killing of a one legged man near New Oxford and the further information concerning his having the cards on his person he was sure of the man's identity and at once communicated with Steward Sheely who in turn wrote to the brother, Edward Devlin.

Mr. Devlin arrived in Gettysburg Wednesday and had the body taken up from its grave in the County Home cemetery. He identified it by several marks on one of the arms. There was sufficient resemblance between the two men to show that they were closely related. Mr. Devlin in speaking of his brother's tragic end said:

"There was no occasion whatever for John to lead the life he did. He had a good home in Philadelphia where he had every comfort. He was endowed with a roving disposition, however, and we could not keep him with us."

Of the $9.71 found on the dead man's person $6.50 was used for funeral expenses. The remainder was turned over to the brother.

The body was taken to Philadelphia for interment, leaving here over the Western Maryland at 3:45 this afternoon.

ARRESTED, WOULD EXPOSE OTHERS

Robert Lee Winston, Arrested for Larceny as Bailor, Says he will Expose those who Sell Liquor on Sunday in and near Town.

Robert Lee Winston was held for Court by Squire Harnish on Wednesday afternoon after being given a hearing on the charge of larceny as bailor, it being alleged that the man had received a watch which he refused to return to its owner.

Winston after his arrest by Chief Shealer said that he knew of flagrant violations of the liquor laws in and near Gettysburg, especially with regard to selling on Sunday and he threatens to expose all whom he knows to be connected with the business.

Winston was arrested on a warrant sworn out by William Thomas. Thomas claims Winston wanted to buy his watch and asked to be allowed to carry it for several days to see what kind of time it would keep. Later Winston pawned the time piece to Penrose Myers, it is said, for seventy five cents. The watch was valued at $4.50.

Winston claims he intended to return the watch though the testimony at the hearing was to the effect that he had been asked for it and refused to give it up.

Winston is so much incensed over the affair that he says he will see that others will be brought to justice and says he will start with the Sunday liquor sellers whom he does not hesitate to name.

The horse became frightened and ran up an embankment, throwing Mrs. Woods and children out of the wagon. One of Mrs. Woods' fingers was broken, and she received some bruises.

Mr. Myers took the injured lady to Hanover in his machine, and procured prompt medical attention and rendered all possible assistance, after which she was conveyed to her home. The wagon was damaged and the loss adjusted satisfactorily. The children escaped injury.

RUMOR DENIED

INSPECTING THE COUNTY BRIDGES

County Commissioners Spend Several Weeks Inspecting the Hundred or More Bridges in Adams County and Find Repairs Needed.

Adams County's Commissioners have been spending the past two weeks inspecting the numerous bridges in Adams County for the purpose of ascertaining their condition and arranging for their repair.

There are more than a hundred bridges in the county and every year the commissioners inspect them all. The work of this year has gone along rapidly and the men who have the management of the county's affairs in their hands find that about half of them require some work to bring them to condition.

The repairs in almost every instance are of a minor nature and the total expenditure of money will not be large. The commissioners take special pride in keeping the bridges in good repair and by keeping them painted have them looking better than the bridges in most nearby counties.

As noted previously the collapsed county bridge at Aspers will be replaced with a concrete structure. This will not be done however until matters connected with the Sprout road bill are decided.

AUTO NEARLY HITS CARDINAL GIBBONS

With Companion He Flees to Escape Accident.

Baltimore, Md., May 18.—Cardinal Gibbons and a companion were caught on St. Paul street between two autos and the venerable prelate had a narrow escape.

As witnesses related it, an automobile, obeying the traffic law as it concerns direction, but not speed, came up St. Paul street, turned west and went west on the north side of Mount Royal avenue. He "cleared" the cardinal easily. The confusion came when another car came south on St. Paul street. The cardinal was about ten feet in the street and the chauffeur swung too close.

The cardinal is an active man in spite of his age, but the chauffeur blew his horn after the manner of chauffeurs who own the streets. The cardinal and his companion moved quickly to get out of the way, but the chauffeur evidently had no idea of waiting on them and tried to beat them across.

It all happened very quickly, but in that instant the car was only a few inches from hitting the cardinal.

"It is a fact," admitted the cardinal, "that my companion and I had to run to escape an accident, but I would not say it was all the chauffeur's fault, because we were confused, and that doubtless confused the chauffeur."

SOME TAFTS GOOD LOSERS

Relatives of President Mulctured of 60
Horses by Mexican Rebels.

Washington, May 18.—The president is congratulating himself that there are some good losers in the Taft family.

Coupled with the announcement that Dr. and Mrs. Edwards, of California, the latter a sister of President Taft, are coming to the White House this week as guests of the President and Mrs. Taft, it transpired that Dr. Edwards and C. P. Taft, who are joint owners of a ranch in Southern California, were recently mulctured of sixty horses by Mexican insurgents, who gave them the alternative of paying $2000 in cash or losing the horses.

Dr. Edwards replied to the demand by wire, according to information received in Washington:

"Do not see how you can possibly lose on your proposition."

The insurgents promptly showed Dr. Edwards, by keeping the horses, how he could lose. The president is congratulating himself that members of his family did not demand immediate intervention in Mexico, thereby adding domestic to international troubles.

SOCIAL SCRAP IN WASHINGTON

Club Bars Taft's Friends and Three Resign.

DENOUNCED BY PRESIDENT

Declares They Were Black-Balled by
"Small-Headed" Men Who Have No
Standing Outside of Clubs.

Washington, May 18.—The resignations of two members of the board of governors and the secretary of the Metropolitan club in this city, made known following a speech by President Taft in which he denounced "small-headed men," who, in clubs, at tempt to manifest their greatness by black-balling men of prominence, proposed for membership, have stirred official and social Washington to the core.

President Taft, who is a member of the exclusive Metropolitan, was reported, several weeks ago, to have felt some resentment over the exclusion from the organization of several newly-elected congressmen and senators, proposed for membership by some of the most influential men in the club. Among the men excluded was one of whom the president was said to be particularly fond.

The furry caused by the club's action at that time had partially died down, when President Taft in an address at the Jewish temple, revived the subject by saying that he had friends—Gentiles—kept out of clubs "by people who were not worthy to button up their shoes."

This was followed by the announcement that Brigadier General Clarence R. Edwards, of the bureau of Insular Affairs, an intimate friend of President Taft; Lieutenant Colonel Charles L. McCawley, of the Marine Corps, formerly a White House aide, and Captain T. M. Potts, of the navy, had resigned their official positions with the Metropolitan club.

General Edwards and Captain Potts were members of the board of governors, and Colonel McCawley, secretary of the club. All three of these officers had asked that their resignations take effect at once, but Captain Potts and Colonel McCawley later agreed to serve until next October on account of the difficulty of filling their places at this time of the year. General Edwards, however, insisted that his resignation should be accepted immediately.

In his speech the president said: "I believe, and I am proud of the fact, that the Jews in America enjoy an equality that they have in only a few other countries of the world. I don't mean to say that they are not racial prejudices here; I don't mean to say that there are not social clubs and other places where the small-headed men who occasionally get into a directory manifest their greatness by using a black ball and shutting out men of importance in the community. But, my friends, while it is aggravating and exasperating, still it is not the worst thing that could happen."

"I have had it happen to friends of mine—Gentiles—who have been kept out of clubs by people who are not worthy to button up their shoes, and who have no standing save in clubs. It is aggravating, I agree, but a man is what he is by reason of his respect for himself, and if he knows that some one who affects to snub him and look down upon him is not worthy—if he knows that that person is not his equal and he cultivates any of the philosophy that he ought to call to his aid—he will have the advantage over his small-headed and narrow-minded critic always."

WILL PROBE SUGAR TRUST

House Approves Special Committee of Nine For the Work.

Washington, May 18.—After squabbling for five hours the house Democrats approved the special committee of nine members selected by Representative Henry, of Texas, chairman of the committee on rules, to investigate the sugar trust.

Representative Hardwick, of Georgia, who introduced the resolution proposing that the sugar trust and in fact all concerns importing, producing and manufacturing refined sugar be investigated, is the chairman of the new committee. The other members are Representatives Garrett, of Tennessee; Sulzer, of New York; Baker, of California; Malby, of New York; Jaconway, of Arkansas; Fordney, of Michigan; Madison, of Kansas, and Hinds, of Maine.

Ohio Bank Closes.

Gambier, O., May 18.—The Gambier Banking company, a state bank, was closed by order of the state bank superintendent. J. A. Holmes, of Columbus, was named to take charge of the institution. The bank was capitalized at $25,000, and had deposits and assets of $130,000. Shrinkage of paper held as assets and inability to realize on it at its face value is the cause of the failure.

Detroit Merchants Favor Reciprocity.
Detroit, Mich., May 18.—A delegation of about twenty Detroit business men, headed by Milton A. McRae, president of the Detroit board of commerce, left for Washington to stimulate sentiment in favor of the pending Canadian reciprocity treaty.

IT IS DONE IN GETTYSBURG

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back in this condition. You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the back for a new and stronger one. Follow the example of this Gettysburg Citizen.

Mrs. C. W. Culp, 423 S. Washington street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I have greater faith in Doan's Kidney Pills today than when I publicly recommended them two years ago. A member of my family had kidney trouble, as the result of an attack of the measles. Backache caused much suffering and there were pains in the side which made lifting an impossibility. The kidney secretions were also unusual. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally procured at the People's Drug Store and the use was followed by great relief. I advise anyone afflicted with kidney complaint to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

TWO PERISH IN BURNING AUTO

Man and Woman, Pinned Under Car, Burned to Crisp.

Dover, N. J., May 18.—Slowly burned to death as they were pinned beneath the large automobile which had turned turtle as they were rounding a curve at Chester, N. J., was the late of Edward D. Middlekauff, a broker, of Plainfield, and his companion, Miss Elsie Walpole, of Scotch Plains, N. J. Middlekauff and Miss Walpole had been on an automobile trip through eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey when the accident occurred. As they were nearing the Chester crossroad Middlekauff turned out to avoid some obstructions and the wheels of his car struck a boulder, causing Middlekauff to lose control of his car, which turned turtle.

Miss Walpole was evidently rendered unconscious, but Middlekauff was conscious when the gasoline tank exploded and slowly roasted him to death. His cries could be heard for blocks.

F. C. Searies, who witnessed the accident, summoned aid and attempted to raise the overturned car from the victims, but in vain. It was not until a team with block and tackle could be procured that the car was raised. By that time both victims had been burned to a crisp.

The Mary Cooney came back to port with Blackmore on board. The search for Blackmore was particularly in by all of the life saving crews along the coast between Cape Ann and the Isles of Shoals, as well as by the United States gunboat Marietta and the revenue cutter Gresham.

ENGLISH AVIATOR'S DARING FLIGHT

Circles Tower on City Hall in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 18.—Flying at an altitude of over 1000 feet, Thomas Sopwith, the young English aviator, encircled the city hall tower in a daring dash from the Point Breeze track. He then made the return with out mishap. He made the trip in 17 minutes and 28 seconds.

The flight sets a new record in aeronautics in Philadelphia, the city hall never before having been circumnavigated by a heavier than air flying machine.

The flight was made in Sopwith's sixty-horse-power Howard Wright biplane, the same machine with which he crossed the English channel, flying from England to Belgium. This feat won for him the $20,000 De Forest prize and placed him in the front rank of aviators of the world.

Thousands craned their heads to watch the speedy and graceful progress of the machine as it flew bird-like over the tall buildings in the business section. The flight was made without preliminary announcement, and many were ignorant of the identity of the daring bird-man.

The start was made unannounced. As the big machine soared high above the Point Breeze track and shot directly northward the crowd knew that the aviator was off for a lengthy flight, but his objective point had not been disclosed. Soon it was lost to view.

Fifteen minutes later the aeroplane again hove in view. When the machine sped with express train-velocity toward the track and settled on the earth the crowd rushed toward the bird-man.

Cheer after cheer arose from the throats of the spectators when it became known that Sopwith had established a new mark for local flying. His sister, Miss May Sopwith, who accompanied the aviator from England, ran forward in advance of the crowd as it surged on the track and, embracing her brother, kissed and congratulated him. Hundreds shook hands with Sopwith while he blushing thanked all of his well-wishers.

WOULD AMEND ANTI-TRUST LAW

Bills in Senate to Make All
Trusts "Bad."

RESULT OF OIL DECISION

Democrats and Progressive Republicans Solidly Favor Measure to Depive Courts of Discrimination Between "Good" and "Bad" Trusts.

Washington, May 18.—The expected renewal of anti-trust legislation following the Standard Oil decision in the supreme court came when Senators Jones, of Washington; Brown, of Nebraska; Culberson, of Texas, and Reed, of Missouri, introduced bills to amend the Sherman anti-trust law.

The bills are designed to offset the interpretation of the law as laid down by Chief Justice White and seven of his eight colleagues and to take away from courts the discretion to differentiate between "good" and "bad" trusts.

In his opinion the chief justice read the word "unreasonable" into the law to qualify "restraint of trade."

"No combination in restraint of trade shall be regarded as reasonable within the terms of this act."

Mr. Clayton, Democrat, chairman of the house judiciary committee, said that he thought the court had exceeded its constitutional powers, and that it would be necessary for congress to repair the injury that had been done to the anti-trust act. Mr. Clayton said that his committee would meet to take up the question and to consider measures for the maintenance of the integrity of the act as it was intended and enacted by congress.

His views are believed to reflect those of the majority of the committee, and the only difficulty before the committee is to find the appropriate means of accomplishing what in the general view of the matter is regarded as imperatively the need of the hour.

There is little doubt that an amendment framed on some such lines would pass the house by a large majority. The Democrats stand practically solidly for such action, and if opposition appeared at all on the Republican side it would be negligible in numbers. The insurgents to a man would be for it.

President Taft's views of the Standard Oil decision by the supreme court have given rise to lively conjecture in all quarters in the capital, although the president himself refuses to make any public comment.

While the message of the president of Jan. 7, 1910, is quoted by some to show that the reading of the word "unreasonable" into the Sherman anti-trust law to qualify "restraint of trade" was in line with his own thought, others point to the same utterances to show that the president opposed any such qualification of the important act.

At the same time callers at the White House thought they detected some disappointment on the part of the president over the court's narrow construction of the statute, but it was evident that Mr. Taft expected no handicap for the government from this source in the actions it may deem necessary against corporations.

The president declined to comment upon the decision, but his visitors gained the impression that he personally would have preferred a decision without the definite limitation which the supreme court has placed upon the statute by reading the word "unreasonable" into the law.

The president told callers in reply to questions that a man might hold views of his own before a decision had been made by the supreme court, but that after the court had handed down its opinion it was the part of a law-abiding citizen to accept it.

The president added, it is understood, that he was glad to bow to the decision of the court and would be the last man to express opposing views.

There will be no change in the attitude of the department of justice toward the prosecutions of corporations under the Sherman law. The department, it was said authoritatively, has never attempted any actions under the anti-trust law except in cases where an unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce was apparent.

The president and his advisers are firmly of the opinion that the oil decision will not hinder the enforcement of the law and that the government will still be able to reach effectively all "bad" trusts, which are the only trusts that the administration has ever had in mind as objects of prosecution.

A HOODOO HOODOOED.

A hen flew into a haymow
And laid thirteen brown eggs
And sat on them for thirteen days
To hatch some yellow legs.

But a farmer came on the thirteenth
And found the eggs so brown
And took them to the market
On Thirteenth street in town.

A man came 'long with thirteen cents
Upon that thirteenth day
And bought those thirteen big brown eggs
And took them all away.

He carried them down Thirteenth street
To his house, which was thirteen.
His wife set them near the cook stove
In a pretty blue tureen.

For thirteen times she intended
To put those eggs away
And thirteen times forgot it
Until a certain day.

When she lifted that tureen lid
There what did she behold?
Why, thirteen fluffy, pretty chicks
With legs and down like gold.

She raised those thirteen chickens
Till full thirteen months old
And sold them to the butcher
For thirteen dollars in gold.

She took her thirteen dollars
To a store on Thirteenth street
And bought a hat with thirteen plumes
That was just awful sweet.

"Oh, yes," you say, "that's all hot air—
It's just a poet's lie."
But, say, we'll send the thirteen eggs
If you the trick will try.

C. M. BARNITZ.

Notwithstanding the fact that chickens are less active in cold weather than warm it is a pretty good idea to see that the hens are provided with a bath of dust and wood ashes, with a handful of powdered sulphur thrown in. It won't take them long to find out what this combination is good for if you put it within their reach.

A reader of these notes living in a section where very little has been done along the line of growing alfalfa inquires how to go at it to get a stand, his purpose being to make a spring sowing of the seed. The writer is of the opinion that more satisfactory results will be had in getting a start with alfalfa if the sowing is delayed until the middle of August. The land used for the purpose should be well drained, enriched with seven or eight loads of barnyard manure per acre and just as free as possible from weed seeds. A piece of land from which a crop of wheat or oats has just been removed would serve the purpose very nicely, as a good share of the weed seed germinates within a short time after the grain is cut, while the remaining seed can be killed in the preparation of the soil for the alfalfa seed. While the seed can be broadcasted, there is little question that more uniform germination will be secured if it is drilled in. From fifteen to twenty-five pounds of seed may be used, the smaller quantity being required if a drill is used. There is a species of bacteria which works on the roots of the alfalfa plant, and a much thriftier growth will be secured if these are introduced into the soil. This may be done by mixing soil from an established alfalfa field with the manure with which the field is fertilized, or soil from the roadside where the wild sweet clover has grown will answer the same purpose, or one can make application to the department of agriculture at Washington for a little tube of the nitrogen fixing bacteria, which is diluted in water and the seed wet with this a few hours before sowing. After being treated the seed should not be exposed to the direct rays of the sun. The writer has known of a number of instances in which a good stand of alfalfa has been secured by sowing the seed in the spring, but in these cases the soil was free from weed seeds, and the young alfalfa plants got a foothold at once and were not swamped with rank weeds, as is so often the case.

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair which was the envy of my friends and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers, but as I grew older it commenced to come out. When my hair was quite thin and gray, I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to try a bottle; and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found my hair was fast coming back to its natural condition. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur until my hair was as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. GRANGE SCHOLARSHIPS.

These Are Worth $65 Each and Are Open to Any Patrons of Ohio.

The scholarships that were offered by the Ohio state grange will admit winners to the two or four years' course in agriculture or domestic science. The rules governing the contest are as follows:

All contestants must be members of the grange in good standing and shall prepare an oration or essay on some subject relating to agriculture if a young man (Class A) or to the household if a young woman (Class B), and they shall read or deliver the same before their subordinate grange not later than Oct. 1.

The winners in each subordinate grange shall contest at their Pomona grange, which shall not be later than Nov. 1. The winners from all Pomona contests shall forward their manuscripts at once to the state lecturer, who will have them judged by competent and disinterested judges.

Grange News and Notes.

New York grangers are strongly opposed to the proposed abolition of the state highway commission in the state.

Anything that tends to lower the price of soil products and does not bring a corresponding reduction in manufactured goods is a detriment to the farmer.

A bill supported by the granges of Massachusetts has passed the state legislature, with only one opposing vote out of 200, changing milk transportation methods in the state from a contractor's monopoly of cars to an equal chance for all shippers.

Mount Duston grange of Westworth Location, N. H., has a membership of forty-seven, and the town has a population of fifty-one. Ten years ago Atkinson grange had 141 members. Since then the town has decreased in population to 440, but the grange has increased to 209.

In all the territory where soft coal is relied upon chiefly as fuel for the kitchen stove it is the very bane of cleanly housewives, smearing their floors, soiling the wall paper, dirtying dishes and blackening wearing apparel. The chief fault with this kind of fuel is that under the conditions which usually prevail a complete combustion of the coal is not secured—that is, the smoke and soot are not consumed, but clog and retard the stove, the pipes and flues. While the trouble cannot be entirely done away, it can be materially improved by replenishing the stove more frequently and breaking the coal up into finer pieces. If at hand it will be found a great help to use either coals or wood with the soft coal. In some localities it is possible to get coke from which the oils and soot producing elements have been largely removed. This makes a very hot fire and will have to be watched closely and renewed quite frequently.

ROMANCE OF THE FARM.

Three Institutions Have Made the Tiller Wealthy, Wise and Comfortable. The story of agricultural education in America, like that of all science, can be traced page after page in the great book of evolution, and the amazing development of the industry in the United States has been due to three factors—first, the state agricultural colleges; second, the national department of agriculture; third, the farmers' institutes.

The American agricultural colleges had their beginning in a revolt against the so-called classical education, but it was never intended, as their eminent founder pointed out, that they should be dissociated from a broad and liberal university training. Mr. Justin S. Morrill, the author of the "Magna Charta of Higher Agricultural Education," more than once stated the real purpose of his bill. "It is perhaps needless to say that these colleges were not established or endowed for the sole purpose of teaching agriculture. It was a liberal education that was proposed. Classical studies were not to be excluded and therefore must be included."

The number of agricultural colleges now established is sixty-five; the present value of their permanent funds and equipment is $100,000,000. A recent census showed 73,813 students, with 6,997 teachers.

The rise of the United States department of agriculture is a romance of the last century. As far back as the year 1822 a strong effort was made to transform the mail—some 200 acres of land which surrounded the capitol buildings—then practically a barren waste, into an experiment farm in which to propagate new and rare plants. But it was not until forty years later that the United States department of agriculture was erected on the selfsame spot which had previously been sought as an experiment farm.

The alpha and omega of this great organization is the practical application of modern science to the service of the farmer. It can perhaps best be summed up in a homely remark of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, who on assigning new duties to an expert said: "Don't tell me now about your laboratories. Tell me what you are doing for the man at the plow, out in the fields, with his coat off."

Then come the farmers' institutes. These wonderful societies are scattered all over America and boast a membership roll of more than a million mature men and women. These institutes may be defined as "societies established for the promotion of agriculture among the farming population," and they came into being in order to make the college teaching more practical and more in sympathy with the needs of the farming community. They have proved a great success and have done much to speed forward the agricultural industry. Lectures are given by agricultural experts and practical farmers, and the meetings last only a day or two at most. In this work the farmers' wives and daughters take a prominent part, and women's institutes are now established all over the United States and Canada for the study of household science.

A Seeder For a Few Cents.

One can make a cheap seeder to drop seed behind the plow in the following manner: Take a tin pan that holds at least a quart. Cut a board round and a little larger than the pan and screw pan A to the round wheel B. Near the rim of pan punch in some holes as far apart as you want the seed. Have a stoppered hole in the board wheel through which to put in seed. In center of wheel and pan make a hole to put through a bolt for the axle. Make handles and put axle bolt through at the end and fasten other end to plow. Let seeder run back of plow. The whole affair costs less than 25 cents. It will drop all small seeds—cane, milo, Kaffir corn, broom corn and all the like—and will do as good work as any single row planter except that it will not cover the seed. The next round however, will cover it with the plow. Farm and Fireside.

A generous farmer wants others to have the benefit of his experience and is always anxious to assist his neighbor in every way possible. We need more generous farmers and fewer selfish men who care nothing for society further than to get its protection for themselves.

Time to Spread Gypsum.

Gypsum, or "land plaster," ought to be spread on meadows early in the season, when there is plenty of moisture present, as it requires fully 400 pounds of water to make available 100 pounds of gypsum. It assists materially in releasing the potash and making it available; therefore on lands that are supplied with an abundance of potash which is not very available plaster may be extremely valuable.

There are several states in which tracts especially and definitely devoted to the production of timber or orchards are exempted from taxation covering a considerable period of years. Those who are interested in either of the above lines would do well to look up the laws of their respective states relative to the matter in order to profit therefrom, while if there be no such laws the attention of one's state representative may be called to the fact.

SETTING AN ORCHARD.

Doubtless quite a number of our readers will be setting an orchard for the first time this spring, and a few suggestions may be helpful. With a view to saving ground the novice often makes the mistake of setting the trees too close together. We have known of cases where they were set twice as thick in the row as intended ultimately, but the trouble with this is that a fellow seldom has the courage to cut out every other tree after it has grown several years and begun to bear. It is better to put the trees the right distance apart at first, putting the ground between to some annual crop, which can be cultivated. Twenty feet apart is about right for peaches, twenty-five for pears and from twenty-eight to forty for apples, depending upon the variety. For family use a selection of varieties, a couple of trees each, may be made so as to give fruit through as long a period as possible. For commercial purposes it is well to set but one or two standard varieties if the acreage is limited and not more than two or three if it is considerable. The trees should be a year old, with well developed fibrous roots, which should be pruned back carefully to a length of about eight or nine inches. The writer has found the easiest way to plant to first set three rows of eight stakes across the field, one at each edge and one through the middle, putting them tree distance apart, next settling similar rows across the field at right angles to these. With this preparation one can sight both ways for position in any part of the field and set a stake accurately without aid of string or measuring rod. With this method one should have the setting board—four feet long, five inches wide, peg notches an inch square cut in the center of each and a notch cut in from one side so as to give a space about an inch square at the exact center of the board. After setting the stake where the tree is to be set on the board so stake is at center, set stakes in end notches, remove tree stake and board, dig hole, slip tree in, replace setting board and hold tree in place in middle notch while filling in the earth. The trees should be set five or six inches deeper than they stood in the nursery. Within a few days after the trees are set they should be pruned back to a uniform height, from eighteen to thirty inches, depending upon whether one wishes a low or high headed tree. However, the low headed, open topped tree is favored by the majority of the best orchardists.

TRANSPLANTING SHADE TREES.

There are a few points to remember in the transplanting of shade trees that may be helpful to the readers of these notes if they have never had any experience along this line. In the first place, one will get a tree much sooner if he takes a sapling three inches in diameter at the ground than he will with smaller trees but a couple of years from the seed. After the selection of trees has been made the earth should be removed from the roots within a radius of two feet of the trunk and the lateral roots cut at this point. The tree may then be bent over and the downward growing roots cut so that they will be at least eighteen inches long. The roots should be kept shaded from the sun to prevent drying out while being carried to the place of planting. It is well to prune any torn or broken roots so as to give a clean healing surface. In setting the tree the hole should be dug so as to give plenty of room and the tree set a bit lower than it was in its native haunt. Before the removal from the wood lot where it grew the branches should be cut back so that they will be no longer than the roots. If the season should be very dry the trees should be watered. Trees like the elm should be set not closer than thirty-five feet, and if one is looking a long time ahead forty or fifty feet is none too great a distance. With the hard maple, ash, hackberry, birch, thirty feet is about right. A plan followed by many is to set trees at one-half the desired distance and a few years later thin out. The chief defect with this plan is, however, that the thinning out process is likely to be postponed too long, resulting in a deforming of the trees that remain.

A REAL TIME SAVER.

Before the spring work on the farm begins in earnest it would be an excellent idea for the man of the house to make for his wife a fireless cooker. It will not only be a great saver of fuel, but will save energy and strength for the wife, especially when the heat of summer comes, by eliminating hours over a hot range, which to many women is one of the hardest and most exhausting features of their work. With the hay box, dinner can be started over the morning fire, put into the cooker and left there without further attention until time to serve the meal, when it can be taken up and enjoyed by the housekeeper without being herself half cooked and too tired to eat. The cooker has still another point in its favor, which alone ought to commend it. It is the fact that in cooking none of the flavor of the meat or vegetable can escape, as in ordinary boiling on the top of a stove, hence the dishes so cooked are especially savory. Oatmeal can be started the evening before and after a night in the cooker is hard to beat for breakfast. While the ordinary homestead cooker can be used only for things which are to be boiled or stewed, by the introduction of soapstones broiling can be accomplished.

For heaven's sake, Sallie Hedges, what does this mean?" "We was all starvin', and I took to the road. Please don't tell paw and maw."

The party returned, stating that their search had been a failure. But there were no more robberies. In a few weeks Hank Burke married the robber and provided for the old couple until they died.

Readers of these notes who get three square meals daily with a bite between if they want it will have a better idea of what the famine is in portions of northern China when they know that the best fare of these starving people is cakes made of leaves and stems mixed with millet chaff. This has been supplemented by the bark from most of the trees.

The Robber

By RUTH GRAHAM

David Venables many years ago, when Missouri was a wilder country than it is now, riding on one of the dirt roads and coming to a bit of higher ground where the road turned, heard in the bushes on the rise a voice which seemed to be that of a boy.

"Halt, thief!" Venables drew rein. He was armed, but, feeling sure that he was covered by an unseen enemy, thought it dangerous to attempt to draw a weapon. "Well, what do you want?" he asked. "Put yer valybles in the road."

Venables, though disliking to be robbed by one whose voice indicated that he was little more than a child, yet dreading a bullet in his brain, complied. Taking his watch from his fob and some silver money from his pocket, he tossed both to the ground.

"Is that all yo' got?" asked the voice. "Yes."

"Well, go on." Venables rode on and when he reached a tavern a few miles distant reported that he had been robbed by a boy who could not have been more than fourteen years old, for his voice had not changed.

Within a week Edward Ormsbee, when riding on the same road on which this robbery had been committed, saw walking ahead of him a youth who might have been between sixteen and nineteen years of age. He was dressed in the costume of the country, buckskin, and had a pistol at one hip and a knife at the other. Ormsbee, when he reached him, called to him and asked where he was going. Learning that the traveler had some distance to go, Ormsbee invited him to get up on his horse behind him and he would give him a lift on his way. The youth accepted, put his foot on Ormsbee's gave him his hand and was pulled up on to the horse's back.

In a few minutes Ormsbee felt cold iron against his head, and the boy behind him told him that he was about to go through his pockets and if he moved he would be shot. Ormsbee was not only paralyzed by surprise, but unable to defend himself in his position. He made no resistance, and the boy took his wallet from his pocket, containing $10 in bills, the state bank currency of the period. Then, they being in a wood, the young robber slid off the horse's rump and disappeared among the trees.

The next robbery was committed on a peddler, who said that the robber was a bearded man with a squeaky voice. Then followed another robbery by a man with a strip of cloth over his face, with holes cut for his eyes and nose. All agreed that the voice of the person who had robbed them was either not that of a grown man or else it was pitched in a very unusual key.

However, it was decided that the youngster had been permitted to commit his depredations long enough, and a posse was organized to hunt him down. So one morning three men—the number was considered quite sufficient—were armed and started out for the purpose. Just outside the settlement they stopped at the house of old Hedges and his wife, a couple whose poverty had been notorious, but who now seemed to be getting along very well.

"No; our Sallie's clerkin' for a man over in Hudson county, and she's keepin' us up."

When the party left it was arranged that they should proceed separately, but keep in touch. They hunted all the morning and part of the afternoon, when two of them heard a couple of shots and hurried in the direction of the sound. They found Jim Turner wounded in the hand. A masked man had held him up; but, being ready for the robber, Jim had fired at him. The robber had returned the shot and run.

All started in the direction the masked man had taken, moving several hundred yards apart. It was not long before they heard some one breaking through the bushes, ascending a hillside in the bed of a dry creek. They followed, but were soon stopped by a bullet singling over their heads. One of them, Hank Burke, a young hunter used to Indian fighting, crawled forward and reported that there was a little foot made of stones about four feet broad and as many high, with a loophole. They couldn't take the position without a likelihood of some of them being killed. It was decided that Hank should go forward for a parley. He did so, taking a position behind a tree.

"Say, you, thar, there's three of us here, all armed. You'd better surrender."

Burke listened for a reply, but none came. Presently he heard a sob.

Leaving his tree, he went forward. Neither shot nor word greeted him. When he reached the miniature fort there behind it sat the robber. He was not masked, but his hands covered his face. Seizing the wrists, Hank exposed the face.

"For heaven's sake, Sallie Hedges, what does this mean?"

"We was all starvin', and I took to the road. Please don't tell paw and maw."

The party returned, stating that their search had been a failure. But there were no more robberies. In a few weeks Hank Burke married the robber and provided for the old couple until they died.

The Price-Campbell cotton picking machine, which was operated successfully on a number of southern plantations last season, is said to possess an almost human ingenuity. Its steel fingers selecting the ripe from the unripe bolls and reaching beneath the branches and getting bolls that are hidden. A comparison of the hand and machine picked cotton at the mill shows that the latter contains less waste than the former, while in the field the machine picks as clean as the average negro help. In amount the new picker does the work in a day of from twenty to thirty hands.

Until a few years ago the bulk of the world's supply of sulphur was got from the vicinity of the Italian volcanoes, but today the greater part comes from beneath the prairies of Louisiana, and only hot water and compressed air are used in the mining process. The Italian sulphur in its natural state contains 50 per cent of impurities, but the Louisiana product tests 99 per cent. Boiling water is forced down the space between the ten and six inch pipes which extend to the bed. This turns the sulphur to a liquid, and it is then pumped up through the smaller pipes by means of compressed air and flows into vats 350 feet long, 250 feet wide and 40 feet deep. Here it cools and hardens and when desired for shipment is broken up with hand picks and shoveled into cars like coal. Some of the wells in the section mentioned produce 500 tons daily.

The surest as well as simplest way of preserving eggs—and April is the best month in which to do it—is to make a solution by adding one part of water glass (obtainable at any drug store) to about fifteen parts of boiled water. Only fresh and clean eggs should be used, and they should be placed carefully in an earthenware jar previously scalded and the water glass solution poured over them to a sufficient depth to cover. Eggs put up in this way will keep from eight months to a year. If used for boiling later a pin hole should be made in one end of the eggs so used, as the solution makes them air tight, and the pin puncture will keep the eggs from breaking open on boiling.

SLEEPLESSNESS

Its Cause and Remedy:

Do you know what it is to lie awake nights, fidgety, restless tossing about, counting 100 backwards or sheep jumping over a fence, all in a vain endeavor to lose yourself in slumberland and get the rest which you so much need.

No one, unless they have been troubled with insomnia, can begin to realize its horrors and how wearing it is.

In nine cases out of ten it is simply a case of overworked nerves or derangement of the digestive system. Thousands of such cases are being cured by Vinol. As proof we quote from a letter recently received from Marion, Ind.

"I could not sleep nights, was run down, nervous, had no appetite and was all discouraged. Vinol made me well after all other remedies had failed. I sleep splendidly, and have gained in strength." Mrs. L. E. Heinlein. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We ask every person who suffers from sleeplessness or who is nervous or run down to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not help them. Vinol contains no drugs or oil, and agrees with everyone. People's Drug Store, C. Wm. Beales, proprietor, Gettysburg, Pa.

A Dead Stomach

Of What Use is it to Anyone?

Thousands! yes hundreds of thousands of people throughout America are murdering their own stomach, the best friend they have, and in their sublime ignorance they think they are putting aside the laws of nature.

This is no sensational statement; it is a startling fact, the truth of which any honorable physician will not deny. These thousands of people are swallowing daily huge quantities of pepsin and other strong digesters, made especially to digest the food in the stomach without any aid at all from the digestive membrane of the stomach.

In other words, they are taking from the stomach the work that nature intended it should do, and are also refusing it the only chance for exercise it has. MI-O-XA stomach tablets relieve distressed stomach in five minutes. Taken regularly for a few weeks they build up the stomach and make it strong enough to digest its own food. Then indigestion, belching, sour stomach, headache and stomach misery go.

MI-O-XA stomach tablets are sold by People's Drug Store and leading druggists everywhere at 50 cents a large box, and are guaranteed to cure all stomach distress or money back.

LEWIS E. KIRSSIN,

Baltimore Street.

The first irrigation project started after the signing of the reclamation act by President Roosevelt in June, 1902, was formally dedicated March 20. This dam, built to impound the heretofore waste waters of Salt and Tonto creeks, in Arizona, is the chief feature of one of the largest irrigation projects in the world. It is located seventy-six miles east of Phoenix, which is in the midst of a wonderfully fertile valley, 240,000 acres of which will be refreshed with water from the great reservoir which the dam creates. The dam is 235 feet long at the bottom between the canyon walls, and from the river level to the crest of the spillways at either end of the dam it is 220 feet. The base of the dam, which rests on the solid rock forty feet below the bed of the river, is 170 feet thick, tapering from this to a thickness of sixteen feet at the top. Over this and the bridges which span the spillways at either end a road runs, protected by a four foot coping at the sides. The dam is curved and arches upstream to give greater strength. The dam creates a reservoir which will extend twelve miles up the streams mentioned and will have a capacity of 1,284,204 acre feet. The dam has cost $9,000,000 to date, and it is estimated that $2,000,000 more will be required to complete it. An interesting fact connected with the construction of the dam was the blasting of a road from the solid rock through the mountains a distance of some twenty-four miles, over which the bulk of the materials used in the construction work had to be hauled by teams. Another was the manufacture at the site of the dam from nearly rock of practically all of the cement used in the building of the dam, there by saving hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A western woman, a resident of Seattle, Wash., has suggested to the city council the passage of an ordinance which will compel all owners of cats to put small bells on them so that the birds will be given warning on their approach and thus thousands of the feathered tribe saved from destruction. Considering the uselessness of the average cat, the above suggestion would seem to be a good one.
